PREFACE

The first five editions of Subject Headings for the Information File formed part of the Modern American Library Economy Series, John Cotton Dana, Editor. The list was based on headings in use in the Information File of the Public Library of Newark, New Jersey. The Series was discontinued in 1943.

The sixth and seventh editions, based on headings in current use in the Public Library of Newark, were compiled by a member of the staff of the library but published independently. Miss Lois M. Wenman, who compiled the third, fourth and fifth editions, is no longer connected with this work but the Information File follows as closely as possible the procedures which she perfected and which have proved their value through nearly eighteen years of use.

The major changes in the seventh edition occur in the fields of art and education, where standard headings have been expanded or subdivided and others added to cover new developments in these subjects. Additional entries represent the normal changes of the past four years, including a new division for material on the United Nations.

There is one important typographical change in this edition. The symbols x and xx are used to denote, respectively, "Refer from (see references)" and "Refer from (see also references)."

List of Subject Headings 1

THE INFORMATION FILE

The Information File or vertical file system for bringing into easy reference use current and ephemeral material such as newspaper clippings, leaflets, and pamphlets, has its accepted place in most American libraries. It may be a small collection filed under broad general headings sufficient for the needs of an average town library, a file under the subdivisions of one subject with a few related headings for a special library or a greatly expanded collection divided into separate files for the various departments for a large city institution. The List of Subject Headings for the Information File is based on the headings in such a multiple file in present use in a large public library. It serves the Public Library of Newark as a union list of headings for separate files in the Art Department, the Education Department, the Lending and Reference Department and the eight branches of the library (approximately 160 vertical file drawers in all). The headings used in the Business Library, which maintains its own method of preparing such material, are not included.

The subject headings in the list have been checked with those in the Art Index, the Educational Index and the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature (The H. W. Wilson Company, 950 University Avenue, New York City). Some adaptations and changes have been made, for the most part in the section covering local material. Certain "catch-all" headings have proved of value. The folder Public officers contains announcements of appointments to public office where biographical material is not included. Calendar of events contains announcements of future events, meetings, etc., and Chronology contains any series of dates covering more than one subject, such as the Sunday section of most city newspapers reporting the events of the past week. A chronology of a subject is filed under the subject.

There are five divisions within the list, local city, county, state, the United States government, and the United Nations. The subject headings in these divisions are preceded by the name of the city, county, state, United States and United Nations (shortened to Newark, Essex Co., N.J., U.S. and U.N.). Thus the material is grouped into units which may be taken readily from the general file and operated separately if so desired. Headings assigned to the different departments of the library are not so designated in the printed list except by the subject of the heading itself; however symbols may be noted in ink in the margin, A for Art Department, E for Education Department, R for Reference Department, etc. Any one of these symbols or a combination of symbols points out to the user the file or files where the material may be located.

Local Headings

The local headings are duplicates of the general headings, preceded by the name of the city, county, or state but with no reference from the general heading. Some differences may be noted in subject heading practice between the two files. These differences are made necessary by the large amount of local material on certain subjects such as biography. In the general file all biography is under Biography. A-Z, with cross references from the various professions and interests (i.e. Scientists. See also Biography. A-Z). In the local section the reverse is found. Newark and New Jersey biography is filed under the profession or interest with cross references from the broader heading, Biography. A-Z (i.e. Newark. Biography. A-Z. See also Newark. Scientists. A-Z).

All local material is filed under local headings, never in the general file. If there is no suitable local heading for an item, a new heading is made at once or the material is placed under the next broader heading until such time as sufficient material warrants the making of the proper heading and the printing of the folder. Clippings concerning the political activities of a trade union in New Jersey file under N.J. Trade unions until enough material has accumulated to make the heading N.J. Trade unions. Political activities. In this way no protracted search is necessary for material when a new heading has been decided upon.

Divisions of the File

The subject headings under U.S. are for the most part departmental and those under U.N. are organizational. It has been found more useful for quick reference, to file actions taken by the various United Nations groups under the name of the group rather than under the subject as is the general practice throughout the rest of the file. Thus, all current discussions or decisions of the United Nations General Assembly file under the heading U.N. General assembly. Current session. When the current session is over the folder is weeded, material of permanent value is refiled under subject or under the heading U.N. General assembly, if a resume of actions taken, and the folder for the current session is refiled, containing only the date and agenda for the next session. Travel is another division within the file, subdivided by country, state and subject. This can be easily expanded into a separate Travel file if so desired. Only items of pure travel should be filed here, other material is filed under the name of the country or state.

Cross References

Cross references follow general cataloging practice, from the general to the specific, to and from headings of equal importance and "see" references from a popular phrase or title to the permanent or formal form. Short cuts are employed, such as "see also special subject" for subjects too numerous to list and "see also special country with subhead" for a subhead in general use. "Refer from" references are included, leading back to broader or related aspects of a subject and facilitating the elimination of references in cancelling headings.

MAINTENANCE OF AN INFORMATION FILE

In the establishment and maintenance of an Information File a few basic procedures should be followed. Elaboration of these procedures will depend upon the amount of money and time available to carry them out. The cost of a satisfactory Information File cannot be judged by the prices paid for the material contained in it, most of which is free or inexpensive. Selection, preparation, filing, weeding, making and cancelling subject headings and printing folders take considerable time and the cost of equipment and supplies increases steadily. Yet because such a file makes available to a busy reference staff the information requested day by day over desk and telephone and not found easily in books or periodicals, many librarians feel it to be well worth the money and time.

Suggested procedures

1. Limitations of the file
2. Types of material to be included and sources for obtaining such material
3. Use of a basic form of subject heading
4. Physical preparation and care of the file

Limitations of the File

The subjects to be covered in an Information File should follow closely the book-buying policy of the library and the services given to the public. A special library or a department of a public library will have natural subject limitations similar to those of its book collection. The public library in a small town will usually find its needs met by information concerning the local history and government, city, state and federal services, current events and some material dealing with controversial questions of the day. The general reference room of a large city library maintaining desk and telephone reference service which answers questions on all subjects will find it more difficult to define the limitations of its Information File. Yet such decisions must be made if the file is not to become a catch-all for material that is never used and properly belongs in the waste basket.

Two general rules for exclusion from the file may safely be considered. One covers information seldom requested. Suggestions from the reference staff will be helpful here and experience will prove their worth. In particular, it is well to check the use of the publications of distant cities or states (publications of border states may contain valuable local material), opinions and speeches of other than local people, material published at the author's expense, legal and medical advice and publisher's announcements. The second rule deals with duplication of material found in other reference tools. This would eliminate book reviews, biog-graphies other than obituaries (exception would be a file of local biographical material), duplicates of cataloged items, reprints from periodicals available in the library's collection, unless of special value, newspaper releases, and out-of-date items such as annuals other than the latest, which may be filed elsewhere in the library.

Subjects not covered by these rules and logically found in an Information File are current events, local, national and international, bibliographies, statistics, surveys and pamphlets on current topics, also information concerning local and national associations. Articles clipped from current periodicals because of their timeliness and popularity, general bits of information not easily located in books but, once found, in need of a place for future reference, and answers to difficult reference questions which have entailed research and may be needed again also have a place in the file.

With these suggestions in mind and the list of subject headings at hand, selections for the file should be a simple routine matter.

Types of Material Suitable for the Information File and Sources for Obtaining such Material

Newspaper clippings, pamphlets, monographs, periodical reprints, clipped periodical articles, bibliographies, booklists, government publications (federal, municipal and state), ephemeral periodicals, annual reports and statistics are all suitable for inclusion in the Information File.

Newspaper clippings. For local news, check the local papers regularly, including the small weeklies published by local groups and associations. For national and international news check the New York Times, the New York Herald Tribune or the nearest metropolitan daily. The Christian Science Monitor has excellent unbiased news reports and surveys and is available in all localities or by mail. In checking, keep in mind the subject headings in the file, attempt to balance both sides of controversial issues and adhere as closely as possible to factual material.

Pamphlets, monographs and reprints. Pamphlet publishing is so prolific that selectivity is the main problem in ordering. There are many excellent pamphlet indexes available: the Vertical File Service Catalog, the Bulletin of the Public Affairs Information Service (mostly government publications), Pampleteer and Pamphlet Index. Booklist and Publishers' Weekly have sections devoted to "free and inexpensive" material and the Wilson Library Bulletin, Library Journal and other library publications regularly note worthwhile titles in the pamphlet field. There are also pamphlet series published on a subscription basis. Among these are Headline Series, Editorial Research Reports, Public Affairs Pamphlets, Chicago University Round Table and America's Town Meeting of the Air. They cover current problems when they are of most interest to the public. Ordering pamphlets direct from the publishers is recommended. Such publications are rarely of more than current value and the quickest method of acquisition is an advantage. A form postal for free material is a time saver and may be used in requesting "any published material" as well as a specific publication.

Bibliographies and booklists. Subject bibliographies are included in the listings in pamphlet indexes but also may be obtained from associations which publish bibliographies at regular intervals, and by checking library or other professional periodicals. Bibliographies compiled by members of the staff for any professional purpose are useful, also the price lists of the various departments of the federal government. Booklists may be obtained from other libraries through an exchange method or by checking the library periodicals.

Government documents. United States government publications are an excellent type of material for the Information File. A few of these are priced but most are free and obtainable from the Superintendent of Documents in Washington, D.C. If the library is a government depository, check the new arrivals regularly for suitable material and order duplicates for the file. Otherwise, check the U.S. Publications Monthly Checklist or the regular pamphlet indexes, particularly the Public Affairs Information Service, and order as directed.

State and city documents. State and municipal publications are usually free to public libraries, sometimes available through the mailing list system. Check the pamphlet indexes or the Monthly Checklist of State Publications and order direct, where the local government does not maintain this service. The local papers often use such government reports and publications as sources for news items and the careful scanner will not find it hard to pick up the reference. Items weeded from the file will also call to mind the necessity for later issues of state and city publications and should be checked carefully for this purpose.

Periodicals. Clipping periodicals regularly for the Information File is not practical. Few libraries can afford extra copies for clipping and most articles are only of value if current. The periodical indexes and reprints take care of those articles of permanent value. An exception would be material for classroom use such as plays, projects, etc. There are many ephemeral bulletins, news letters or periodicals published which are not of a format suitable for the regular shelves or for clipping. They are available through subscription or membership and may be placed whole in the file and discarded when the file is weeded.

Annual reports and statistics. These will be noted in the pamphlet indexes, in periodicals or newspapers, or in the items weeded from the file. Most national associations maintain mailing lists for their reports and other publications and local associations are cooperative when requested to keep the public libraries supplied with their published material. Keep only the latest issue in the files, discarding older issues or retiring them to permanent files.

Selected Source List

A directory of publishers and organizations printing material suitable for an Information File is included in the cumulated issues of the Bulletin of the Public Affairs Information Service and in each quarterly issue of the Pamphlet Index. Other indexes will provide the names of publishers through checking the titles listed.

PHYSICAL PREPARATION AND CARE OF THE FILE

A uniform method of preparation for the file is possible in spite of the many different formats which will appear in the day's accumulation of material. Use a metal edged ruler to cut newspaper clippings in an even rectangle, leaving a generous margin at the sides to allow for wear and at the top for the subject heading. Staple all loose sheets and continuations together and fold all printed articles with the title outside. Write the subject heading on the upper left hand corner with a heavy pencil; in the upper right hand corner mark Reference or Lending, as desired, in pencil or with a rubber stamp, also the date when the item is to be removed from the file for discard (see section Weeding the file). The Information File is primarily a reference tool and items should be stamped Reference. If pamphlets are included they may be stamped Lending and loaned as books. All items should be marked plainly with the source and date. Stamp clippings with a rotary rubber stamp with newspaper name and date, or mark with a heavy pencil on the side of the article. Mark magazine clippings with title and date of the magazine at the lower left hand corner and pamphlets with the date of inclusion in the file if there is no publication date noted.

If pamphlets are included in the file, it is advisable to have duplicate folders for the more popular headings. Mark folders No. 1 and No. 2, file only pamphlets in one folder, and the flimsier items in the other, thus giving protection from wear and tear.

Hand-print subject headings on the folder, using an art pen and black India ink. Include "see also" references but not "refer from" references. Headings for "see" references may be printed in like form on colored rope board instead of folders for easy identification in the file.

WEEDING THE FILE

The usefulness of an Information File is largely determined by the speed with which out-of-date material is eliminated.

The most accurate method of weeding is by comparison, that is, by examining the contents of each folder at regular intervals, discarding all but the latest and most useful items. Since this method is feasible only in a small file, some form of automatic weeding is necessary for the larger collection. The use of a "weeding" date, when subject heading the material, is a simple method which requires a minimum of effort. It consists of an evaluation of each item for the period of time it will be of use in the file (three months or one year are suggested). The subject heading should be noted on the upper left hand corner of the item, the weeding date on the upper right hand corner, using a rotary dater. The filer should examine each folder after use, straightening the contents and checking subject headings. At the same time all items bearing a weeding date of the current month or any previous date should be removed, giving such items to the subject header for reevaluation. The date of weeding the folder should then be noted in pencil on the outside of the folder so that the full process need not be repeated until the following month. The subject header may, at leisure, examine such accumulated material for redating or discard. Most newspaper clippings may be discarded after one year, in many cases after three months. Reports, statistics, annuals of all sorts are useful only until the next issue arrives and the frequency of publication will govern the weeding date. Pamphlets, monographs and leaflets are useful for at least a year and can be redated for another year and refiled after weeding. If historical material is included in the file, and some local history is usually desirable, the use of the weeding date should not be attempted since the continued redating will only mar the item. The subject heading on the folder will indicate the type of material and the method of weeding can be changed to a periodical examination. In some cases, it may be necessary to add a subhead "History" to the subject heading for such identification.

Ephemeral periodicals, newsletters or bulletins should be dated for (three) months and discarded when weeded.

When preparing an annual for the files, clip to it a note for the filer "Remove the old issue." Items in the folder Calendar of events, need no weeding date. Simply circle with a pencil the printed date of the event, mark Reference and weed the folder regularly each week. A folder that is too full may be weeded, regardless of dates, in order to reduce the number of items or a duplicate folder (No. 2) may be made or a subdivision of the subject heading.

The above procedure for weeding will only take care of those folders that have been in use. The filer should make a practice of a regular inspection of the files, a drawer or a certain number of folders a day, checking the last weeding date on the folder and withdrawing for weeding all those that have not been in use. In this way the elimination of out-of-date material is as continuous as the addition of new items and the file is kept active.

SUPPLY LIST

Folders. Reinforced, correspondence size, the heaviest the budget will allow. For filing clippings, pamphlets, etc.

Stapler. For stapling loose sheets.

Pressboard. Colored, for guide cards or "see references", same size as the folders.

Ink Pads.

Rubber Stamps. 1. Plain for blocking out dates; 2. Reference or Lending; 3. Rotary dater - for stamping clippings with names and dates of newspapers. Made to order by any stationer. Also simple date stamps.

Ruler. With metal edge for cutting out clippings.

Pencils. Extra soft for writing subject heading on newsprint.

Blue pencil. For checking newspaper articles.

Form Postals. Requests for specific items or "any published material."
